FORD ROUGE PLANT SHUT DOWN TODAY DUE TO STRIKE

Nearly 80,000 Men Affected;
Defense Orders of $155,-
000,000 Are Held Up

STRONG PICKET LINES

Governor Van Wagoner Orders All State Police
Sent To Scene

By International News Service

DETROIT, Apr. 2.—Governor Van Wagoner today ordered State Police Commissioner Olander to send "the full available manpower of the State Police to Dearborn at once for the purpose of maintaining order" as violence broke out at the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Company which has shut down because of a UAW-CIO strike.

Nearly 80,000 men were affected as were defense orders totaling $155,000,000 held by the plant, considered the largest single industrial establishment in the world.

A company spokesman said that the plant could not operate because enough men to man the machines had not been able to get through the picket lines.

Michael F. Widman, Jr., director of the union's Ford organizing committee, said:

"The strike is completely effective. The only persons in the plant this morning are members of the service department, who remained through the night, and some maintenance men in the glass building, the press steel building and the power house whom the union requested to report for work. . . . The response to the strike call against demonstrates the deep resentment of the Ford workers against conditions in the Rouge plant and their support of the UAW-CIO as their collective bargaining spokesman."

With picket lines and automobile barricades thrown around the heart of the Ford industrial empire, violence flared within an hour after the union members took their stand at five o'clock this morning, a little less than five hours after the strike call was issued. The strike order came after an estimated 10,000 to 14,000 workers left the plant after engaging in a "sit-down."

Rocks and pop bottles flew and heads and shoulders of pickets were beaten when about 75 workers emerged from the plant carrying three-foot metal bars and set upon an approximately equal number of pickets at gate 4. Some 200 men came out on an overpass and showered pickets with pop bottles and sections of lead pipe.

Thirty-Two More To Go Into Selective Service

HARRISBURG, Apr. 2.—(INS)—Governor Arthur H. James today announced the quotas of men each of Pennsylvania's 422 local boards will furnish to fill a United States army requisition for 2,880 trainees under the selective training and service act.

The trainees—all white—will go into service between April 21 and 30 at induction stations in Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre, Harrisburg, Altoona and Pittsburgh.

The local board breakdown includes:
Bucks, LB 1, 9; 2, 8; 3, 7; 4, 8.

INVITE PARENTS TO VISIT SCHOOLS TONIGHT

All School Buildings To Be
Open From 7.30 to 9.30
For The Public

EXHIBITION OF WORK

In accordance with Governor Arthur H. James' proclamation designating Wednesday, April 2nd as Free School Day in Pennsylvania, Bristol public school buildings will be open to the public this evening from 7.30 until 9.30 o'clock.

This will afford the parents an opportunity to consult with the various teachers; and there will be an exhibition of the work of the elementary grades.

On the 107th anniversary of the Pennsylvania Free School Law, there are 1,855,530 students guided by 63,973 teachers in 11,421 schools, supported by the citizens who invest more than $220,000,000 a year for this purpose.

Governor James' proclamation reads: In the Name and By Authority of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Governor's Office, Harrisburg.

PROCLAMATION
One hundred seven years ago, on April 1, 1834, the General Assembly of this Commonwealth enacted the Pennsylvania Free School Law.

Three great names stand out upon this anniversary of the legislation which guarantees equal educational opportunity to all—George Wolf, Samuel Breck and Thaddeus Stevens. Let us not forget what they did in this great cause.

Today the vision of those men and the great men who preceded them in the Keystone State has grown to a mighty army that numbers 1,855,530 students, guided by 63,973 teachers in 11,421 schools. This great establishment of learning is a great force for

List Five-Point Plan To End Ford Strike

By International News Service
DETROIT, Apr. 2.—UAW-CIO officials today listed a five-point plan for settlement of the strike which closes down the Rouge plant of the Ford Co. The points were:

1. Immediate reinstatement of all workers discharged because of union affiliation. 2. A wage increase of ten cents an hour to bring wage rates of Ford workers up to rates employed by General Motors and Chrysler. 3. A seniority system to govern layoffs and rehiring. 4. A shop steward system to handle grievances. 5. Abolition of the company's so-called espionage system and the company service department.

Labor Expert En Route To Detroit

Chester, Apr. 2.—In between long distance telephone calls to the scene of the strike, James Francis Dewey, crack Federal labor conciliator, today packed for a hurried trip to Detroit to attempt settlement of the CIO walkout at the Ford Motor Company. "I have been conferring with various people in Detroit trying to set a conference," the labor expert explained.

British Sink Italian Destroyer

London, Apr. 2.—British aircraft attacked and sank an Italian destroyer. It was announced officially today. A communiqué said the destroyer was sent to the bottom off the Eritrean port of Massawa.

At the same time, the Admiralty announced the 4,188-ton German merchant vessel Bertram Rickmers was intercepted by a destroyer while attempting to escape from Massawa.

Germany To Name New Yugoslavia Minister

Belgrade, Apr. 2.—Formal German negotiations to name a new minister to Yugoslavia, replacing Viktor Von Heeren, aroused new hopes of a compromise solution of the Berlin-Belgrade crisis today although fears of a sudden Nazi blow persisted.

Even as a panicky mass evacuation of civilians from Belgrade got underway, the German government notified the Foreign Office of its desire to appoint Ulrich Von Hasselt as new Envoy to Belgrade.

Von Hasselt was minister to Yugoslavia some years ago and a former German Ambassador to Rome. His choice was believed acceptable to the government of Premier Simovic.

Hopes are still held out in some quarters that a visit by Simovic and some of his aides to Rome may result in peaceful mediation of the dispute by Mussolini.

Meanwhile, Simovic issued an order of the day designed to halt the exodus from Belgrade and calm the nation's fears.

MORRISVILLE TO ASK WPA FOR SCHOOL FUNDS

Board Decides To Erect New Red Brick Building If Funds Are Available

ESTIMATED COST, $40,000

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 2.—If funds for WPA labor are available a new four-room red brick school house will soon replace the present structure at the Capitol View School grounds. This announcement has been made by the school board.

The Morrisville Board of Education has voted to build the new building, estimated to cost $40,000, and steps have been taken to have plans drawn up and presented to the WPA for approval. Approval, if granted, will find the local authorities starting work on the new building in the Third Ward about June 1st.

As a result of many complaints from parents about their children contacting colds while in the present wooden structure, followed by a visit of a delegation of mothers at a recent Board meeting to protest conditions at the school, President William Anderson appointed a special committee to consider erection of a new building.

First considered were the results of the pre-school age children census recently taken by members of the Senior class, under supervision of Assistant High School Principal E. Raymond Schwinger. This survey showed that according to the number of pre-school age children now residing in the area served at present by the Capitol View School, there would be enough pupils in that part of the borough to justify continuing a school.

After going thoroughly into the condition of the present structure, which was built as a temporary building more than 25 years ago, the committee decided it is neither practical nor economical to repair it. It was therefore decided to recommend the construction of a new building if the district's legal borrowing capacity is great enough to enable the Board to float a bond issue in a sufficient amount to cover the cost of construction.

The borrowing capacity of the district was found to be sufficient and officials are now awaiting WPA assistance.

Because of the great reduction in the number of WPA workers in other sections, some doubt is expressed as to whether the WPA will consider the work here.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

A program of music is to be given in Deep Run New Mennonite Church at Bedminster on Tuesday evening next, by the men's gospel team quartet of Bluffton College, Bluffton, O.

One of the members of the quartet is Harvey Bauman, Quakertown. Other members are Edmund Zehr, Gridley, Ill.; Glen Graber, Wayland, Ia., and Paul Soldner, Bluffton, Ohio.

Herbert Fretz, Lansdale, a former member of the congregation at Deep Run, will speak.

The quartet will be on a tour of Mennonite churches in Pennsylvania during the Spring vacation of the college students from April 3rd until April 14th. Dr. I. W. Bauman, a member of the Bluffton College faculty, will accompany the young men on their tour.

Bucks County Kennel Club marked its first birthday this week, when 500 people gathered to see the 115 dogs entered.

The gymnasium of National Farm School was the site of the affair, and hundreds gathered about the four judging rings.

Outstanding honors in the match fell to a pointer, Prune's Own Parang, owned and exhibited well by Mrs. Percy Hoopes, of Saddlecock Kennels, Doylestown. Mrs. Hoopes is a noted professional handler. The judge—Altha T. Whitaker—placed a cocker spaniel, Jo Ann's Thunder, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Straus, of Allentown, second, and Brumchilde, a dachshund, owned and shown by Sara Peterman, of Roxborough, third.

But probably the most pleased individual in the show was a Doylestown police officer, Leonard (Jerry) Coulton, who presented Top Hatter of Totto, a dalmatian. The "carriage dog" placed fourth in a very classy field of champions.

One hundred and twenty-five persons attended a public sale of real estate and personal property at the home of Garret Martin on the road leading from the Makefield Friends' Meeting House to the River road in Upper Makefield township, near Doylestown, on Saturday.

The real estate, which consists of a farm of 174 acres, was purchased for $10,000 by Charles J. Happ, Doylestown. On the property are a woodland tract of about 20 acres to be used as a pasture. On the property also is a 14-room stone house. Bidding on the real estate began at $7,500.

The sale was in charge of John Wright, and E. Newlin Brown, Doylestown, received the bids. Charles Roberts served as clerk.

The annual Spring dinner dance of the Doylestown Country Club, is to be held on Saturday evening, April 19th, at seven o'clock, with dancing from 10 to two. This event will mark the official opening of the calendar of social events for the 1941 season. The club is being extensively redecorated and a number of new members are joining.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Two Appointments

Washington, April 1.
IT is true that the international situation is such as to absorb far more than the usual time, energy and thought of the President. Nevertheless, the normal functions of the Government must receive Presidential attention if the whole machinery is not further to deteriorate and disintegrate.

EVEN before the great New Deal expansion of the Federal machine, the routine Presidential duties were considered all any man could adequately perform. This has been the main argument of those who have urged Mr. Roosevelt to fix upon a responsible head for the defense effort and delegate to him real power instead of retaining it all in his own hands, thus burdening himself with so vast an amount of unnecessary detail that he has to neglect other matters of importance.

—O—
THERE are today a number of things pressing hard upon him not connected with defense but nonetheless of considerable importance. This does not take into consideration a financial program for taxes and retrenchment upon which defense must rest if it is to be sound but to which slight thought seems to have been given. The purpose here is again to call attention to two major appointments now hanging fire and which would appear to call for the best he has in judgment. One, of course, is to the Supreme Court to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Justice McReynolds; the other is a chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission to fill the place of Mr. Jerome Frank.

—O—
SO far as the latter is concerned, there is an opportunity for Mr. Continued on Page Four

Robert W. Beidelman Dies At His Morrisville Home

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 2.—The funeral of Robert W. Beidelman, 66, who died at his Bridge street home yesterday, will be conducted on Friday at two p. m. from his late residence by the Rev. Clifford G. Pollock, pastor of Morrisville Presbyterian Church. Burial will be made in Morrisville Cemetery.

The late Mr. Beidelman, who conducted a grocery store here, was born in Penn's Manor; and had lived in this borough for most of his life-time. He was a member of Capitol View Fire Company; Trenton Aerle, No. 100, Fraternal Order of Eagles; and the Loyal Order of Moose, Trenton Lodge, No. 164.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wedger Beidelman is the only survivor.

CROYDON SCOUTS, CUBS LEARN OF PLEXIGLAS

Three Rohm & Haas Company
Representatives Speak and Give Demonstrations

COMMITTEEMEN THERE

CROYDON, Apr. 2.—A demonstration in preparation of plexiglas for countless uses, and an instructive talk on manufacture and uses of such, was given before 25 Boy Scouts and Cubs of Croydon Troop, last evening, by three representatives of Rohm & Haas Chemical Company, Bristol.

Gathered in the fire station for this interesting program also were members of the troop committee, and Scoutmaster A. B. Stiles. The Cubs had been invited to the affair as guests of the Scouts.

W. W. Farr, fabrication manager, told of industrial uses of plexiglas; Francis Alcott, pattern designer, also spoke; and Joseph Kish told of hobbies through use of plexiglas.

The trio demonstrated the electric box for heating the plexiglas so that it may be bent; and also demonstrated the buffing wheel for polishing purposes. They showed how wax is used on the buffing machine belt to prevent friction.

Among the items displayed, made from the product, was a combination tongue depressor and throat light, the light following the band in the depressor, to make examination easier. The trio also told of countless uses of the product for airplane windows, eyeglasses, electric light bases, ornaments, etc.

Miss Elizabeth Bevan Dies At Cathart Home, Devon

A former well-known Bristol woman, Miss Elizabeth Bevan, died at the Cathart Home, in Devon, this morning where she had made her home for a number of years. Miss Bevan had been an invalid for some time.

The daughter of the late Lewis J. and Elizabeth Bevan, she had resided for many years at Dorrance and Cedar streets. Miss Bevan was a member of the First Baptist Church.

The body will be brought to Bristol for burial, arrangements being in charge of R. C. Ruhl, funeral director.

Edward C. Bekes Presents A Classification Talk

Edward C. Bekes spoke at the weekly dinner meeting of the Bensalem Rotary Club, last evening, at the Green Light Restaurant.

Mr. Bekes, a member of the club, and also operator of a drug store at Cornwells Heights, spoke on the general subject of compounding prescriptions; and told of some requirements of the food and drug act in relation to patent medicines.

Four visitors from Morrisville Rotary Club were present. The Rev. Arthur F. Gibson, president, was in the chair.

TWIN BABY DIES

One of twin daughters born to Mr. and Mrs. Elwood M. Hazel, 1509 Wilson avenue, yesterday morning, died at three p. m. yesterday in the Women's Medical College Hospital, Philadelphia.

The babies were born at 6.30 and 8.15 o'clock in the Wagner hospital here. The twins were immediately taken to the Philadelphia hospital, and placed in an incubator, death occurring for the younger one during the afternoon.

Mrs. Hazel, who will be remembered as the former Miss Eleanor Dyer, is reported as doing nicely in the Wagner hospital here.

SUDDEN ILLNESS

Miss Catherine Fallon, Spruce street, suffered an attack of illness at her employment in the Rohm & Haas Chemical Company laboratories yesterday. She was removed to the office of a local physician, and later taken to Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia, in the ambulance of Bucks County Rescue Squad.

RALPH DE DONADO NAMED DIRECTOR OF VOCATIONAL CLASSES

New Director To Take Charge
Immediately of National Defense Instruction

MRS. DAVIS IS HONORED

Named To 9th Regional Council of Penna. State School
Directors' Ass'n

Last night the Bristol school board elected Ralph A. DeDonado as vocational director. Mr. DeDonado will supervise the classes being held here in connection with national defense. Mr. DeDonado was formerly associated with Fleetwings, Inc., and organized the vocational classes now being conducted there in which workers are being educated to take their places in the Fleetwings shop.

The Board approved the salary list for teachers for next year, so that the annual budget can be compiled at a special meeting to be held next Wednesday evening.

The proper officers of the Board were authorized to borrow such sums of money as are needed, to pay the teachers' salaries next month. The shortage in funds is due to advances made for the national defense classes for which the Board will be reimbursed; and the fact that the state appropriation has not as yet been received.

The Property Committee reported it had visited the Beaver street school building and after an examination it was the opinion of the committee that the building was substantial enough to carry the machinery which it was

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2, 1941

LIGHT AND DARK

Second only in importance to the passage of the $7,000,000,000 war-aid bill by the Senate is the testimony of Defense Production Director William S. Knudsen in regard to the capacity of United States industry. Having previously announced that tooling preparations would be practically complete by the end of March, he told the Senate Appropriations Committee that ultimately this country will be able to produce twice as much war equipment as any foreign nation, including Germany.

Although ultimately is a vague word, the news must come as a shock to Hitler. The implication is that in not many months the United States will be building at least as many planes as Germany. Knudsen is not a politician; he has no need to speak for mere effect.

Familiar with the plants of foreign countries, he is in a better position to estimate their present capacity than most men. Besides, he has followed this nation's stepping up of production stage by stage. The bottleneck in the tooling machine field is being eliminated more rapidly than was expected, and, with a little more experience in production problems, the OPM chief believes the country will be ready to go into high gear.

Under the new program, Britain is expected to get at least 10,000 new airplanes. Add these to her own increased production plus what the rest of the empire can furnish, and it becomes plain that unless Hitler can win a quick victory this spring his boasted superiority in the air will vanish.

Even now there are rumors that Germany may shift her seat of government from Berlin to Vienna, definite proof that the RAF is doing greater damage to Berlin and other cities in northern and central Germany than Nazi authorities have admitted.

The one great menace to achieving a production twice that of any other country is the prevalence of strikes. No sooner is one settled than two more crop up. The toll is particularly heavy in industries manufacturing airplane parts. Several aircraft companies often depend upon the same plant for parts.

A comparatively small shut-down, therefore, can cripple production in a number of plants with contracts running into hundreds of millions. The same thing is true of strikes that tie up steel companies.

Mr. Knudsen can take care of the production problem, but can his co-chief, Sidney Hillman, handle the labor situation? The latter's task is complicated by the fact that large segments of labor itself are beginning to look askance at their own representative in the government.

Hitler's chief hope is an industrial deadlock in the United States.

Fire has broken out three times in a U. S. battleship under construction. Probably the speed with which the men work generates sparks.

Germany is reported to be planning another war in 1961 if this one fails. If the world permits another German menace to develop it will at least be running true to form.

There's a move afoot to make daylight saving time universal in the United States. Strange as it may seem, this is a project that will not require an appropriation from Congress.

Appreciating the importance of keeping fit as an aid to national defense, the William Freihofer Baking Company announced yesterday that Freihofer's Perfect Loaf is now a Defense Bread, enriched with Vitamin B-1.

The statement said:

"The Company's decision to enrich the loaf was prompted by the recent action of the British Government which directed that all British-baked bread be fortified with Vitamin B-1 to supply the extra energy needed by the British people to withstand the strains of bombings. Vitamin B-1, known as the defense vitamin, is necessary in the daily diet as a protection against nervous upsets and lack of energy.

"Lover Come Back"
by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

The Captain, who had been staring speculatively into space, now repeated softly, "Bottled up—in Shaman's—Lagoon!" Then he turned to Kemp with a brisk "Three days, he said? Give me those three days, Starbuck, before ye make any deal with Reynall. Meself, I'll be settin' a flea in Chris's ear which, it may be, will hatch some fish for ye before the three days are up. Should it not, then take over Reynall's surplus—if he has one! Will ye do me that—as a favor?"

"I'll do it, Captain," Kemp smiled suddenly and got up, extending his hand. "And now, perhaps you can do me a favor, sir."

"Put a name to it, me boy."

"I'm scheduled to make a shipment on the T.K.K. liner sailing from Seattle in five days. Because of the strike, that shipment's still here on my wharf. The only way I can land it in Seattle on time is to get it aboard the freighter Makari, southbound out of Juneau tomorrow afternoon."

"But the Makari's not calling at Sika."

"How well I know it!" Kemp smiled ruefully. "I thought they would, if I made it worth their while, so I sent Ikeda to Juneau by plane early this morning to arrange it. He just wired back he hasn't been able—"

"Ikeda!" the Captain snorted scornfully. "Well, 'tis too late to fix it up now. Why the devil didn't ye come to me sooner?"

Kemp flushed. "I didn't think fast enough, sir. But it just struck me we might load the cases aboard the Tanya, and have her meet the Makari in Juneau. And, since you have business there anyway, I thought you might go along and—er—exert a bit of influence, if needful." He arched his eyebrows inquiringly.

The Captain nodded. "It could be done, if ye get busy at once with the loadin'. The Tanya must haul out on the beach for a tide or two, but the Windflower will serve as well. Ye'd best start your men loadin' her, right away."

"Then you'll do it, sir?"

"Aye. We'll sail from here about seven this evening, and be in Juneau fourteen hours later. Consider it done, me boy!"

He looked sharply at Kemp, who still lingered uncertainly by the table. "Well, well!" he said testily. "Ye've got about everything ye asked for, Starbuck. Why, then, do ye stand there lookin' as if ye'd just seen your best friend dumped over the side?"

He started for the front door, automatically searching his pockets for his cigarette case. Failing to find it, he whirled irritably about, and swore under his breath. "Damn! Must have left it upstairs."

He went back up the steps, his feet making no sound on the thick carpet. But at the top he halted abruptly and stood staring through the partly open door of the Captain's sitting room. The aperture was just wide enough to show O'Moore at his table, with the model of the Glory drawn close up before him. Sunlight fell on his bent silver head, on the Lilliputian ship—and on a full-length plank, pulled straight out from the tiny vessel's hull, revealing a shallow drawer.

The Captain, with a look of complete satisfaction on his old face, lifted several pieces of folded tracing linen from the drawer and, after inspecting each one briefly, replaced it. Then he gently pushed the drawer inward until, with an audible click, the plank snapped back into place.

Kemp's face was a mirror of mixed emotions as he realized what he had, inadvertently, spied upon. Making no sound, he turned and hurried from the house, his cigarette case forgotten.

"I promised Starbuck fish, and you've been swamin' him with water-hauls and excuses. And d'ye know who's goin' to take over the contract you couldn't fulfill? Reynall! Reynall, with his Thlinget egg-crates and rotten nets! Reynall can get fish! Reynall can fill his own cans and Starbuck's, too. But you can't even—"

"Damn it, Cap'n!" Chris was almost in tears. "Reynall's got all those fish in Shaman's Lagoon to draw on besides—"

"And why has he got 'em?" O'Moore's fist banged the table. "Because you couldn't see past your nose, Mister Sandvik. Because he could cripple O'Moore's whole fleet, smack under the eyes of O'Moore's dumb fleet commander! That's why his hell-dredged lagoon is now burstin' with herring. But Dan O'Moore's boats must go empty—and all because his fleet boss hasn't nerve enough to fill 'em. Bah!"

"All right! All right!" Chris leaped to his feet and pounded the table. "I'll show you whether I've got nerve or not! I'll bring Starbuck his fish—or nobody else will! With that he slammed out of the room."

Sondra and her grandfather were about to sit down to an early dinner, when the Forest Man appeared. He had just come from Cape Edgecumbe, he said, and he brought a basket of wild strawberries for Sondra. Though his clothes were travel-stained, and he looked as if he needed sleep, he yielded to Sondra's coaxing and stayed to dinner.

Delighted to have a new and appreciative audience, the Captain talked at length of the letter from the Secretary of the Navy, the recent strike, the turn of circumstance which was taking him now into Juneau. In rare spirits, he prolonged the meal until Alexander brought his bag and reminded him, "The Windflower, sir, is whistling for you."

The Forest Man went down with Sondra to see the Captain off. They found Kemp nervously pacing his float, where the Windflower lay, ready loaded. Though plainly anxious to see his cargo on its way, Kemp had a smile and a pleasant word for the Forest Man. "Just been admiring the Glory," he said. "I never saw a prettier set of sticks in a ship. You got them out, I believe?"

"Yes. They're all clear, straight-grained spruce. Such spars are hard to find, but they'll be harder to break."

The little group stood silent for a moment, all eyes upon the Glory of the West, lifting the tracery of her new masts and cross-trees high above her snowy hull.

"What a beauty she is!" Kemp exclaimed. His face, for a moment, had lost its harassed look. "It seems a shame her kind had to give way to steam and gas. But they—we moderns must have speed."

"Speed—bah!" the Captain ejaculated. "Give her a fair clant of wind, and the old girl yonder will show clean heels to anything in these waters, I'm tellin' ye."

Kemp smiled dubiously. "She has grand sailing lines, sir. But the Dragon there can reel out her fourteen knots or more, each hour of the twenty-four."

"Aye, and the Glory will sail three knots to her two—given a wind! Meself, I've logged her at nineteen knots, and she with more to give, had her masts and gear been fit to take the strain."

"Those masts will take it," the Forest Man said confidently. "I'd gamble they'll stand more gaff than any pine that ever came out of Oregon."

"So? Belike, we can be testin' that, sometime." The Captain's head was tilted back, his eyes narrowed lovingly upon the top-masts of his old command. "I'd reinforce that mizen backstay, and run a—Humph!" He caught himself up, with a belligerently embarrassed glance at his companions. "Well, well! I'd best be castin' off, if we're to catch this tide through the Narrows."

He stamped aboard the Windflower, looking very sturdy and lovable. Sondra thought, in his gray suit, with his hat tipped forward aggressively over his eyes, and the brim turned up behind. On deck, he turned and leaned over the rail to grip Kemp's extended hand.

"I've wired ahead to the Makari's agent, and all is arranged, Starbuck. Do ye want I should bring Ikeda back with me on the Windflower?"

"Why—er—if he's ready to come, sir. He had a lot of things to do in Juneau. I'll wire him, of course, that you're bringing the shipment in."

"We'll be off, then," O'Moore nodded to the Windflower's skipper, who immediately yanked a short blast from the whistle.

"Misteh Stahbuck! Misteh Stahbuck! Wait boat, please! Vancouver package!" Kemp's book-keeping was running toward them, calling excitedly and holding aloft a small wooden box.

"Hold her, skipper," growled O'Moore.

The bookkeeper came up, panting, and thrust the little box at Kemp. "I think, please, you forgetting."

"Oh, yes! Thanks, Ohashi," Kemp took the box and turned to the Captain. "This is a small special pack of herring I put up for a dear friend—a little old English lady in Vancouver, B. C. She's very fond of it, and I'd hoped to get this down there in time for her birthday—four days from now. But I guess it can't be done."

O'Moore reached for the box, whose lid, unnailed at one end, displayed oval tins neatly packed inside. "Let's see, now," he calculated. "From Juneau to Seattle on the Makari takes a good four days. 'Tis only a few hours, then, to Vancouver—but no. 'T would be all of five days before it reached her."

"Confound it! I promised her—"

"I—bad we can't catch the Canadian liner, Princess Julia, southbound out of Juneau tonight," said the Captain, sympathetically. "She'd land your package in Vancouver in forty-eight hours. But she'll be gone long before we get in."

"The Princess Julia! By George, sir, I just heard over the radio that she's making a lengthy unscheduled stop at Taku Harbor, this trip. She'll be there until noon tomorrow—and Taku Harbor is almost on your way to Juneau, isn't it?"

"Aye. To call there would add an hour or two to the trip, but we'd still reach Juneau in good time for the Makari."

"Splendid, sir. Then if you'll just put in at—"

"He broke off, his face falling. "I've forgetting that Vancouver's foreign, sir. I've left the box open for customs inspection, as you see. But of course there's no customs agent—probably no postmaster, even—at Taku Harbor. The Julia wouldn't take the box, unless all red tape—"

"Wouldn't she, now," the Captain broke in, chuckling. "Me boy, the master of that floatin' hotel is none other than Captain Jerry McGrath—and that melancholious Mick was born in the same County Clare that fostered the tribe of

FASHION PARADE

By Max Factor, Jr.
(Famous Hollywood Make-Up
Specialist Writing For I. N. S.)

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—Poise is essential to feminine glamour—just as much so as appearance perfection.

My mind was directed to a contemplation of the above subject on the recent occasion of Ginger Rogers winning the coveted Academy Award for being the most outstanding actress of 1940, with this honor being bestowed upon Ginger for her truly distinguished performance in the RKO Studio production, "Kitty Foyle."

In that picture, Miss Rogers' superb poise was truly a noteworthy thing. At all times she was visibly in command of herself, and of every dramatic situation in which she was placed. And in every instance, Ginger demonstrated to a high degree how poise can so greatly add to a woman's glamour.

When Miss Rogers made her first screen appearances, approximately a decade ago, she was, as you may remember, a talented "cute kid" type of person. Her appearance, her actions, and a not too great abundance of poise were all a part of this fact.

The Ginger Rogers we know today is a completely different personage. We can see how she has ambitiously and intelligently developed her dramatic talents to a prize-winning degree. The chic of her appearance reflects her appreciation and use of all of the refinements in grooming which have been perfected during recent years. And both on and off screen, Ginger is glamorously poised.

Usually, poise is a characteristic which is not naturally apparent in the average person. But it really is a fact, however, that poise can be acquired, and that the process of acquisition need not be a difficult one.

There is a simple formula for poise which, if followed, will more often than not result in a satisfactory command of this desirable quality.

In nearly every case, poise can be automatically commanded simply by seeing to it that you don't speak or act faster than you think.

Watch and listen to the people around you, and observe how steadfastly the truth of the above rule is demonstrated. The persons who most obviously lack in poise are those whose conversation is geared up to a feverish pace, even when they have nothing really important to say, or those who demonstrate that they lack physical poise, and consequently go about upsetting lamps, spilling ash trays, or knocking over glasses.

Poise cannot come if you are perpetually endeavoring to make the hands—or feet—quicker than the human eye. Nor can it come if you endeavor to manipulate your tongue at a swifter pace than the human brain can function.

By doing nothing more complicated than allowing some pause—time to think about a question which has been asked, for instance, and what she is actually going to say in answer—many a woman has acquired a very advantageous degree of conversational poise.

WANTS SPANISH TAUGHT

LUBBOCK, Tex. — (INS) — Dr. Charles B. "You can't begin study of languages too young," Qualia wrote in an article in the Texas Outlook.

EXPOSITION AIDS ARMY

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—The 1915 Panama Pacific Exposition at San Francisco is doing its bit in the present national defense drive. The Army, under provisions of the 1927 deed which thoughtfully provided such action in event of war or national emergency, has taken back the Palace of Fine Arts, sole remaining building of the old Fair. The Army is turning it into a medical supply depot.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Movie-goers now can laugh and thrill with the two-fisted tough and romantic sleuth "Michael Shayne, Private Detective." Brought to the Grand Theatre's last night by 20th Century-Fox this new mystery-thriller has Lloyd Nolan starred in the title role, and lovely Marjorie Weaver heading a strong featured cast.

Based on a novel by Brett Halliday and paced for thrilling action, "Michael Shayne, Private Detective" is first-rate entertainment. Nolan plays the sleuth who is always on hand when everything happens and invariably gets into trouble.

Born in Toronto, Reburn participated in amateur theatricals there for years and has made radio appearances in addition to gaining his skating prowess.

RITZ THEATRE

Described as a romantic comedy set to music, Universal's tuneless farce, "Margie," comes today to the Ritz Theatre.

Tom Brown is seen as a young composer and Nan Grey portrays the pretty wife who inspires him to write the song "Margie" bearing her name.

One of the most novel plots ever offered in a Western picture will be on view when Paramount's romantic drama of the exploits of the Texas Rangers comes today to the screen of the Ritz Theatre, according to advance word from Hollywood.

BENSALEM HAS 50 BOYS DRILLING FOR VARSITY BALL TEAM

Coach Reimer Expects To Cut Bensalem Turnout Early This Week

WORRY OVER CATCHING

Owls Field Veteran Nine This Year and Expect To Be In The Running

By Jack Gill

A large turnout of nearly 50 baseball candidates have been working out at Bensalem high school for the past two weeks. Three days ago they left the gymnasium and hit the field for the first time. During the forepart of this week, Head Coach George Reimer expects to take his first slice of the massive list of candidates.

The outlook for this season is unusually bright and optimistic. A veteran infield, outfield, and two returning varsity moundsman of last Spring are the reasons for joy. The only hitch is the catching department.

Last year, Reimer expected the catching to be well taken care of by two skilled performers. He had as his regular maskman Dea. But during the winter months Dea joined the C. C. C. Then the Owl mentor turned his hopes to Barney Reynolds, a better-than-average schoolboy catcher, who equaled Dea in ability. But the peppery Bensalemite hooked up with the U. S. Navy and nearly sunk Reimer's 1941 baseball ship.

Up from the sophomore ranks arose an inexperienced but hard-working boy in the person of Russ Adrian. Here at last, thought Reimer, was a catcher. What happened? Why Adrian was floored by scarlet fever and will not be available until May.

Now Reimer must select his opening game maskman from Dan Fleming, Ed Sunakowski, Jack Blocker and John Dowd. This is the big task.

The infield at present looks almost set with veteran George Strickler manning the initial base, Jack Hamor taking care of the keystone sack, and heaving Hank Killian again stationed at shortstop. The third basemen will probably be either Warren Scheer or Frank Serravallo, two boys who have been battling tooth and nail for a varsity spot. George Hutton may also edge his way in.

The outfield is well taken care of with three returning stars of last year back again to chase fly balls. Pete Everitt is stationed at left, Dick Mossbrook at center, and Russ Jones in right. Bob Smith, Bill Lambie and Frank Katroba are likely looking prospects for an outer garden berth.

The Owls are preparing for their opening game which is only a week away, and for the oncoming league season in the Lower Bucks loop. With such an experienced array of returning veterans their hopes are bright of dethroning Newtown for the championship.

Expected to play the biggest role during the season are two ace hurlers, left-handed Ted Devoe, the number one twirler, and capable Gene Ashton, the boy who twice shut out Morrisville last campaign. Ashton, however, is a question mark and may not be available.

ST. FRANCIS DEFEATS LA SALLE; SCORE, 20-7

SOLDIER IS 6 FT. 9 IN.

LONDON — (INS) — Jack "Tiny" Nightingale, 6 foot 9 inches in his socks and tallest man in the British Army, has a grievance. Army beds are six feet long, which leaves Tiny with 9 inches overdrift. "And the draught on my bare feet in our huts is something chronic," he complains.

Two Affairs Mark Natal Anniversary For Localite

A birthday party was given for Nicholas Sabatini, Wilson avenue, on Saturday evening, in St. Ann's Club house, celebrating his 50th anniversary.

The evening was enjoyed dancing. A buffet supper was served. 125 guests attended from Geneva, N. Y.; Philadelphia, Bristol, Tollytown, Frankford, Mayfair and Chester.

On Sunday a dinner was enjoyed at the Roma Gardens, Trenton, N. J., in honor of Mr. Sabatini's birthday. Covers were laid for 25.

Mrs. C. A. Pease Named Women Voters' Chairman

Newtown; Mrs. Francis Carver, Ivyland; Mrs. Arthur M. Eastburn, Doylestown; Mrs. Alexander Fleisher, Churchville; Mrs. Thomas Ross, Doylestown; and Mrs. John Follensby, New Hope.

Announcement was made of the state convention to be held in Pittsburgh, May 13-16. Mrs. Clarence Pease will be the county representative.

Mrs. Mary Roebeling, Trenton, N. J., an ardent advocate of women in business, was the first speaker of the afternoon.

Mrs. Roebeling, who is president of the Trenton Trust Company, stated that women have shown their ability to produce in the business world and do not differ from the men in business as long as they do a good job. "They have gained the respect of the men and have made a name for themselves in every worthwhile field in the United States," she said.

"Women were engaged in business as early as the pre-Revolutionary days, but were not recognized or respected for their efforts. At the present time thousands of business enterprises are owned and successfully operated by women," Mrs. Roebeling felt that the progress this country has shown over other countries of the world has been due to the recognition of women in business. About one quarter of the working people in this country are women, she informed.

Mrs. Earl Harrison, Moylan, Delaware County, stated that, traditionally, criminal courts have relied upon corporal punishment or the threat of it. Mrs. Harrison briefly traced the progress of the criminal courts from the 12th century to the present proposed Youth Corrective Authority Act.

She told that: "The juvenile court is now 40 years old. It has stood for the protection of the child, and the individualized treatment and ultimate saving of the child. It has contended that the child should not be held as responsible as an adult. Many judges, however, are not trained for the social readjustment of the child. After a two year study of child delinquency the American Law Institute and other interested people have drawn up a model plan. The Youth Corrective Authority Act will probably be introduced into the Pennsylvania Legislature at this session. The Authority will consist of three men appointed by the governor for a nine year term. They will handle all cases, excepting petty cases involving fines and cases of murder and slaughter. They will employ lay personnel and will use the present set up slightly enlarged."

The subject of "Tax Qualification for Voters" was discussed by Mrs. John Cooper, Pineville; and Mrs. Edward Hancock, Warrington. Mrs. Cooper said she did not believe this was a partisan issue, and after explaining the bill, cited the points against the tax and those for the tax. The negative arguments were as follows:

1. It would reduce the number of voters.

2. Corrupt practice of vote buying would prevail.

3. It would penalize the poor man, especially those on relief.

4. It would destroy permanent registration.

The affirmative arguments for the above four points are as follows:

1. There are too many unthinking voters. Power voters but better voters should be the slogan.

2. No law ever prevented or corrected corruption. Training and education of citizens necessary.

3. The people who do not pay taxes are not generally among the poorer classes.

4. People take themselves from registration lists. Bucks Co. recently sent 5000 cards to non-registered voters and to date only 791 have registered.

Mrs. Hancock opposed the bill. She stressed the vicious practices of such taxation, and stated that payment of a tax is no qualification for good citizenship.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a resolution was passed to send a committee to consult with the county commissioners as to the means of controlling contagious disease in epidemic form in Bucks County.

en the SEC's point of view, cut away the red tape and end narrow and needlessly depressive interpretation of the law. However, none of the names mentioned in connection with the chairmanship holds out promise of that kind of man. Nor do they indicate that Mr. Roosevelt has been searching for one. On the contrary, there is ample ground for fear that the unreasoning hostility and punitive attitude of the left-wing New Dealers toward business in general and the utilities in particular will be reflected in the President's choice.

AS to the Supreme Court vacancy, the two names from which it is considered most likely the President will choose still are those of Attorney General Jackson and Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina.

Mr. Jackson, of course, is one of the outstanding anti-business New Dealers. He is personally closer to the President than Senator Byrnes, and the best-informed opinion is that he will get the post. Particularly is this so since the President picked him as one of his companions on his present vacation. The suggestion that he does not want to go on the bench, of course, is absurd. However, Mr. Roosevelt is under deep obligations to Senator Byrnes, whose selection has been urged by the Republican as well as the Democratic Senate leaders.

THERE are some who think the appointments made by the young radicals of the White House "inner circle" against Senator Byrnes constitute the best reason for naming him. One is that the President cannot afford to let him leave the Senate, as without Senator Byrnes he would be unable to get through the things he still has to ask of Congress. The other is that Mr. Byrnes is so able, so clear-headed and so persuasive that once on the court he not only might accept the view-point of the Chief Justice instead of that of Mr. Frankfurter but would be able to take with him at least one of the New Deal bloc. "And then," they say, "our control of the court would be lost and all our work be nullified." That seems a very great, if unconscious, tribute to Senator Byrnes. At any rate, it is difficult to think of a better reason for his appointment.

IN this connection, the effort to solve the situation by having the President appoint Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, to the court, and having Senator Byrnes succeed Mr. Barkley as Senate leader, seems a peculiarly unhealthy suggestion. In the first place, there is not the slightest honor for Senator Byrnes in succeeding Senator Barkley. There has not been a first-class Senate leader since the days of Oscar Underwood. As Mr. Barkley's successor, Senator Byrnes would merely be the mouth-piece of the President, deprived of whatever initiative and independence he now possesses, his sole function being to carry out White House orders. His only possible reward would be in having certain friendly journalists repetitiously refer to him as "shrewd," "able," and "astute." It hardly seems worth it. It appears an effort to kiss him away from something really worth while with something not worth a nickel.

IN the second place, the effort indicates a contempt for the Supreme Court which the bar and the people both should resent. It is a plan, for reasons of political expediency, to put on the bench an old-time politician, not because of his ability but because of his lack of ability; not because he is a successful leader, but because he is an unsuccessful leader. With the court already suffering in prestige because of the alleged political meddling of two of its members, to put on it a man of this type, whom no one suggests as qualified, would be further to degrade the bench. Perhaps it will succeed, but if Mr. Frankfurter has the influence with the President he is supposed to have, it would seem worth his while to use it in squelching this ill-conceived scheme.
